

INFORMATIVE BROCHURE

WHAT IS THE ROSDC?

The ROSDC sets its challenges in a fictional version of the solar system, where significant infrastructure has been built and living in space is not uncommon. To facilitate this, many companies exist to design new settlements and to provide services, both for construction and operation.

Prime contractors are large companies who dedicate time and money to responding to a Request for Proposal, a contract. You will take the role of an employee in a team dedicated to working on one of these proposals.

The reason for this setting is to help give a sense of how large projects in the industry often work: with many 'subcontractors' being employed to offer expertise and services. Prime contractors often employ hundreds of subcontractors on terrestrial projects.

A selection of these services are made available to help you, as a prime contractor, design a settlement that will fulfil the needs of the client.

THE TASK

On the day of the competition itself, you will be provided with the RfP (Request for Proposal), a comprehensive document outlining all the essential elements that must be incorporated into your presentation. You can find a sample RfP here.

All of the work has to be done during the competition day, once you receive the RfP you can start working. At the end of the day the judges will expect a final presentation. We recommend using Google Slides for the presentation.

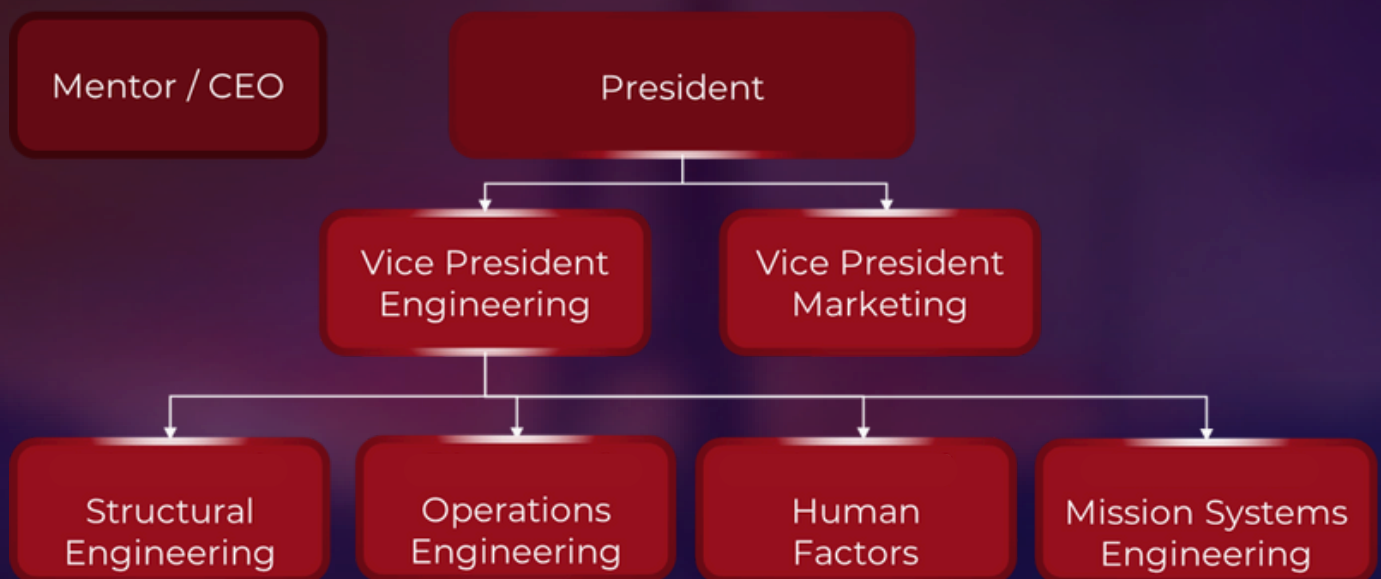

The ROSDC will be held in English, since the EUSDC and the ISSDC are both competitions held with international students. This means that the presentation must also be written and presented in English.

TEAM STRUCTURE

You will be part of a team of over 20, made up of students who have signed up collectively but also individually. The team will consist of various positions, below you can find a diagram showing the roles and departments your team will be split in.

At the start of the competition your team will hold elections for the president and vice president roles. Your company CEO/s is provided by us.

WHAT TO BRING

We highly advise you bring a laptop or a tablet so you can work directly on the presentation (if this is a problem, please contact us).

Lunch will be provided by us, but you may bring extra snacks such as cereal bars or sandwiches to help you throughout the day.
